Little Stories for Bedtime

By Thornton W. Burgess. Copyright 1914 by J. G. Crowe.

You cannot always believe your eyes. You cannot always believe your ears. The truth quite often you will find it not at all as it appears.

Up in the top of a big blue tree in the Green Forest Bobby Coon was doing his best to keep out of sight and at the same time to see what the hunters who were after him were doing.

Then why don't you prove it by climbing this tree? demanded the other voice.

where three shots from the terrible gun carried by one of the hunters had hit him, but he had no time to think about his wounds now. He was lucky that they were not worse. He knew that he must keep his wits working every minute if he would save himself.

from worse wounds, or perhaps being killed. Around the foot of the tree were gathered the hunters. Bower the Hound, and another dog. Bower and the other dog didn't seem to be much interested. You see, they were interested only so long as they could smell Bobby's tracks, and since Bobby had taken to climbing from one tree to another like a squirrel there were no tracks to smell. So they had stopped barking, and were just waiting around to find out what their masters were going to do.

"Come on! Hurry up and climb this tree!" shouted one, as Farmer Brown's boy dropped to the ground from the big chestnut tree from which he had driven Bobby Coon. "Climb it yourself!" snapped Farmer Brown's boy. "I've climbed two trees and it is the turn of some one else now. Besides, that tree is too big, too far up to the first branches." "Oh, come on!" begged another voice. "You know you are the youngest and bravest and the best climber. Just try this one. We'll get him this time!"

"He doesn't dare to. He's afraid!" another voice interrupted, and the sound of that voice was not at all pleasant. It had the sound of a sneer, and you know nothing is more unpleasant sounding than a sneer.

"I do dare to! I dare to climb any tree in the Green Forest!" The voice of Farmer Brown's boy sounded angry. It sounded very angry. No one would have guessed that he was just pretending.

"Then why don't you prove it by climbing this tree?" demanded the other voice.

"Because I've done my share of climbing already!" retorted Farmer Brown's boy, and he sounded as if he meant every word he said.

For a long time that dispute as to who should climb that tree lasted. Bobby didn't stop to listen to it very long. It gave him just the chance he had been waiting for, and he took it. He slipped over to a hemlock tree, and from there he reached another tree in which was a hollow big enough for him to squeeze into. Once safely there he almost chuckled to think how he had fooled those hunters. You see he didn't know that all the time Farmer Brown's boy had been watching him and at the time when Bobby was getting from one tree to another Farmer Brown's boy had pretended to be much more than ever so as to keep the other hunters from looking up.

So you see that was a case where Bobby Coon's eyes and ears were not to be believed. They told him that Farmer Brown's boy was an enemy, which wasn't the truth at all. You know and I know and Farmer Brown's boy knows that if it hadn't been for him something dreadful might have happened probably would have happened to Bobby Coon.

Captain of Emden Gave Her a Ship.

Mrs. Gertrude Robinson believes that Captain Muller, commander of the German raiding cruiser Emden, is one of the greatest men of the world. She it was to whom he gave a vessel rather than sink it. She is the wife of the captain of the British freighter Kabinaga, which left Seattle September 10 with a cargo for Boston and New York. Twelve days later they fell in with the Emden, which fired a shot across the freighter's bow. She stopped, and Captain Muller sent officers to take charge. For several days the Kabinaga was held while the Emden was busy taking other British vessels.

Finally Captain Muller decided to sink the vessel, he had sunk several to the south of the Kabinaga. But when he learned Mrs. Robinson was on board he sent word that the captain might consider the vessel sunk so far as he and the officers were concerned, and that he would make a present of it to her. However, when her husband brought the vessel into Boston Mrs. Robinson made no claim. She turned it over to the owners just as if nothing had happened.

AMERICAN FASHIONS

(By Lillian Young)

The combination of plain with brocaded satin continues to find expression in a great number of the latest dress designs. It is a style which, odd-

In aluminum gray the illustrated design will work up very prettily by using the plain color in Pussy Willow silk, and the brocaded jacket portion in some heavier silk. It may be all in one tone or suggest a bit of color in the brocade.

The bodice is cut with short kimono sleeve extensions and the front edges are left open from neck to waist. Beneath it is worn a bishop sleeved gimp with flaring collar and softly surplised fronts, made of white batiste or net. A deep girle is crushed about the waist and made in one with the bodice buttoning down the center front with a close row of silver buttons.

The skirt of the plain silk is gathered at the top all round. The tulle is applied at the hip line and is also gathered and held in place under a narrow band of soft gray moufflon fur. The hem of the tulle is bordered with the same fur, and clears the lower edge of the underskirt by six or seven inches.

If preferred, the blouse may be made up in velvet to match the silk of the skirt. It would be lovely in willow green with dark fur bandings fine white gimpes and dull silver buttons.

A single rose caught under the collar at one side gives an attractive touch of color.

TWO TRUSTS ADVERTISED ON NEW U. S. BANK NOTES

New York, Dec. 5.—Has Uncle Sam's bureau of engraving played a joke on the steel trust and the harvest trust, or have those two institutions fooled the government?

On the right of the back of the federal reserve note of $10 denomination appears a bustling steel plant; on the left, a harvester binder. These, it develops, are part of the works of the Illinois Steel company, one of the largest subsidiaries of the United States Steel corporation, and of one of the patent binders of the International Harvester company, both alleged to be trusts.

COUNTY TREASURER FOUND NOT GUILTY, OFFICE NEGLECT

Lawton, Ok., Dec. 5.—A jury in the district court acquitted Joe L. Porter, county treasurer, on an accusation brought by the grand jury, of wilful and habitual neglect of duties of his office. The accusation was made against him following examination of his records by state examiners and inspectors.

The presiding judge made a ruling for the guidance of the trial jury that the prosecution must be able to show that Porter's alleged misconduct in office was wilful. Many witnesses testified to Porter's integrity. He has served one term as county treasurer and was re-elected at the last election.

OREGON HAS CONFIDENCE IN FACION OF CARRANZA

Washington, Dec. 5.—Rafael Zubaran, Carranza, agent here has made public a telegram from General Alvaro Obregon, dated yesterday at Vera Cruz, declaring his confidence in the success of the Carranza faction.

It has become known that General Obregon who declared a new revolution against Carranza upon the downfall of Huerta, passed through Washington several days ago on his way to New York. Obregon is understood to be heading for Canada to join his wife.

ly enough has held through three seasons, and that is more than can ordinarily be expected of fickle fashion.
